Dear Leader Schumer and Speaker Pelosi,

The Chief Officers of State Library Agencies (COSLA), an independent organization of the chief officers of state library agencies representing all 50 states, the District of Columbia, and two territories, respectfully requests your support in including investment in libraries as part of the infrastructure package currently being developed by the U.S. Congress. Support of the Build America’s Libraries Act, sponsored by Senator Jack Reed (S.127) and Representative Andy Levin (H.R. 1581) would provide $5 billion to repair and construct modern library facilities across the nation, especially in underserved areas.

Libraries are essential to educational and digital equity. The Build America’s Libraries Act would enable libraries to rebuild, refurbish, and expand their facilities – as well as improve their digital infrastructure and purchase devices – to meet the needs of communities across the country. Libraries provide digital connectivity to those who otherwise do not have access and provide a ladder to economic opportunity for dislocated workers and marginalized populations.

In addition, community resilience is fostered in libraries and America’s libraries, on average, are more than 40 years old. The demands to maintain accessible, secure, and tech-relevant facilities are ever present. In fact, this funding would help address infrastructure challenges faced by libraries such as accessibility barriers, technology capacity, and environmental hazards. Furthermore, the funding would strengthen these essential institutions for future natural disasters and advance the COVID-19 pandemic recovery in communities across the country.

An investment in libraries is an investment in the present and future, as it supports employment, literacy, health, and the overall economy. The economic and social dividends will result in gains many times more than the $5 billion investment. Including libraries within Congress’ infrastructure investment will transform communities in every state and territory, and especially marginalized communities, such as high-poverty areas, rural areas, and tribal nations.

Thank you for helping build stronger communities and fostering economic growth in our states through your support of libraries.

Sincerely,

Jennie Stapp
President
